TOWN BOY FINDS ARSON SCHEME

Robert E. Tipton, in Service of State Constabulary, Makes Important Arrest. Man would have Fired his Own Store.

Robert E. Tipton, formerly of town, a State trooper, is receiving the congratulations of many friends on his discovery of plans by a merchant near Wilkes-Barre to set fire to his own store.

C. E. Sickler, general storekeeper at Noxen, was arrested Saturday evening at 5.30, in his store, by State Troopers Tipton and Haas, on the charge of making preparations to set fire to his store, which was insured for $8,900. Sickler was given a hearing before Squire Koehler, who committed him without bail to the Wyoming County jail at Tunkhannock.

Trooper Tipton went to Noxen, a town near Wilkes-Barre, on Monday of last week to investigate a robbery that was claimed to have been committed in Sickler's store. When he questioned Mr. Sickler about the affair Sickler said that he was anxious to have the matter ferreted out and would do what he could to help him. The storekeeper said that one case of goods had been stolen. Later, Tipton learned that a man was seen driving away from the store with a wagon loaded with merchandise on the night of the supposed robbery and the trooper in following out this clue located the "stolen goods" on the West Side. The load taken from the Sickler store contained ten cases of merchandise. The wagon was driven by a West Side young man who was later arrested and confessed to the entire crime.

Tipton became suspicious and so framed a clever ruse by which he might thoroughly investigate the interior of the store building. Saturday Tipton and Haas went to Noxen and Sickler was asked to go to Kingston to identify some of the stolen goods and as he left the building with Haas, Tipton forced his way to the attic and discovered boxes filled with paper and rags saturated with kerosene and cans of gasoline and kerosene standing around. The doors and windows were nailed and all means of entrance that might be used by people who would come to fight the fire were closed. Barrels full of straw and excelsior were also found.

When the young man who was driving the wagon was arrested he was taken before the district attorney of Wyoming County and confessed. He said that the day planned for the fire was Thursday, January 16, but several State troopers happened to be in town that day, and it was decided that they would delay until a better opportunity presented itself.

LIVELY FIGHT FOR THE LINCOLN WAY

Washington the Scene of Indignation Meeting over Proposed Greek Temple Idea. Idea Ridiculed by Many. Fight now in Congress.

More than a hundred residents of Washington and citizens of Maryland, at a meeting in the Capitol City Tuesday night protested against the erection of a Greek temple in the "mud flats of the Potomac," and strongly indorsed the construction of a model highway from Washington to Gettysburg through Maryland as an appropriate memorial to Abraham Lincoln.

The House of Representatives is today deciding the character of the Lincoln memorial.

The mass meeting Tuesday night was presided over by Lewis B. Shoemaker, of Washington.

Gutzon Borglum, who modeled the wonderful head of Lincoln that now stands in the rotunda of the Capitol, made the startling charge that the commission which selected the Greek temple plan was "packed." He said there were three architects on it and the scheme was "an empty, characterless, featureless pile of $2,000,000 in marble."

Mr. Shoemaker, in opening the meeting, declared that he hoped the highway would be constructed and that in the future development of the American national capital each state would erect on the sides of the memorial way beautiful buildings in which to exhibit their works of art and science.

Congressman Borland, who represents the famous good roads district of Missouri, characterized the Greek temple plan as a "hackneyed form of architecture," with "no appropriateness or historic association as a memorial to Abraham Lincoln." He charged that the Fine Arts Commission, which originated and recommended the Greek temple idea, was "attempting to turn everything in Washington into a form of Greek temple construction."

"The mall from the Capitol to the Washington Monument," he said, "is to be lined on both sides with huge buildings of the same Greek temple pattern to be used by the Department of Justice, the Department of Labor and Commerce, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of the Interior, etc."

"It will be absurd and inappropriate to place Abraham Lincoln, the man of the masses, in a Greek temple. Washington in a Roman toga and Lincoln in a Greek temple are twin artistic follies. This Greek temple will be empty and will be called a memorial to Lincoln."

"There will be nothing in it but a heroic statue of Lincoln in a brand new suit of clothes. A man dressed in nineteenth century clothes, enshrined in a Greek temple, may not strike the Fine Arts Commission as absurd, but it will certainly have that effect upon the ordinary visitor."

"On the other hand, I am strongly in favor of the Lincoln memorial highway. There is no point within easy reach of Washington, which is as inseparably connected with the name and fame of Lincoln as the battlefield of Gettysburg. Such a boulevard would be traveled by every foreign tourist and every patriotic American schoolboy who had the opportunity."

"Such a boulevard would become the nation's pride. It would lead from the nation's capital to its greatest battlefield, that field which is immortalized not only by the burning words of Lincoln but by the dauntless heroism of the citizen soldiers of America; that field where for three long days, under the burning July sun, those two mighty armies hurled themselves against each other and proved to themselves and to all the world that they were one in race, one in courage and one in destiny."

Senator Blair Lee, characterized the struggle between the Greek temple and memorial highway as a struggle between fine arts and agriculture. He said the memory, character and achievements of Lincoln are more in sympathy with agriculture than with fine arts.

"Abraham Lincoln was a product of agriculture," said Senator Lee. "He was born on a farm and reared among the agricultural classes. His sympathies were with the agricultural classes."

Widely Known Business Man and Veteran Dies at his Home in York. Identified with Adams County Trolley Activities. Friends here.

Capt. William Henry Lanius, banker, railroad builder and a leader in the development of York, died at his home in that city Tuesday afternoon, aged 69 years.

Captain Lanius was born at Flushing, L. I., November 26, 1843. He was the son of Henry and Angeline Lanius, his father's ancestors being prominent in the history of the Moravian Church and among the earliest German settlers west of the Susquehanna river.

When the Civil War opened Mr. Lanius, then 17 years old, enlisted as a private in Company A, of the Eighty-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. He rose rapidly and before he was discharged he was made captain of Company I, of the same regiment.

In 1865 Captain Lanius entered upon a business career in York, first engaging in the lumber trade. In 1888 he was chosen president of the Baltimore and Harrisburg Railway Company, which built a line from York to Porters Siding, now controlled by the Western Maryland. He later organized the York Street Railway Company, which built the first street railway in York, and served as president until 1906. Later he led in the building of the electric railway between Hanover and Littlestown.

The York Trust Company was organized through his efforts in 1890, and he had since served as its president. He was the first president of the York Board of Trade, was a trustee of the York County Academy and one of the charter members of the York County Historical Society.

Captain Lanius was the first commander of Gen. John Sedgwick Post, No. 37, Grand Army of the Republic. He was also a member of the Loyal Legion and of the Masonic Fraternity.

Gettysburg people who patronize the "movies" will be interested to know that admiration for the acting of Francis X. Bushman has caused a second cousin, Roy Bushman, of Carlisle, to run away from home with the evident intention of joining some moving picture company. The parents are very apprehensive for the safety of the boy.

John Bunney, who is known to local moving picture lovers, will soon take a vacation from that occupation and spend some weeks in vaudeville, receiving $1000 per. Mr. Bunney was in legitimate theatrical work before going into the picture business and now says his face is the best known in the world.

Among the home talent productions promised for the near future is an up-to-date version of "The Merchant of Venice" which will be produced in Brua Chapel by Class 33 of St. James Sunday School on the evening of February 7th. The play is a modern comedy.

A Lancaster veteran, basing his calculations on the fact that only five of his company who fought at Gettysburg in 1863 will be able to attend the celebration in July, says that not more than 6,000 or 7,000 veterans—both Blue and Gray—will attend the celebration and that if outsiders keep away the old soldiers will be able to enjoy themselves.

The measles epidemic seems to be subsiding gradually and daily more of the children are getting their freedom after the three weeks' quarantine. In some instances, however, other members of the family have contracted the disease some days after its first appearance with a brother or sister and the quarantine was prolonged just that many more days.

The Ben Toy Musical Company has been booked for the Wizard Theatre for every night of next week. The company has played a number of other towns in this section during the past few months.

TALES OF CATS.

Stories That Come From the Mysterious Tower of London.

Two stories of the intelligence and sympathy of our feline friends were told me during one of my numerous visits to the Tower of London while I was living in England.

Southampton was a prisoner in the Tower with the Earl of Essex during Elizabeth's reign. In some strange way or by some unrecognized faculty a favorite cat of his found his abode and suddenly appeared to him, having made an entrance down the chimney. After his release by James I., Southampton had his picture painted with his faithful friend at his side. The portrait, I believe, can today be seen at Wilbeck Abbey.

The other tale is of Sir Henry Wyatt, who was committed to the Tower during the reign of Richard III. and suffered much from want of clothing and food. He would have perished if a cat had not come down into his room and warmed him by lying on his breast and saved him from starvation by bringing him an occasional pigeon caught on the leads. Although the keeper was under orders not to improve his food, he agreed to cook anything which Sir Henry provided, and the pigeons which the cat brought saved his life. He also had a picture painted showing the cat offering a pigeon through the bars of his cell.—Our Dumb Friends.

MOCK WINDOWS.

They Were Common in England When Real Ones Were Taxed.

The window tax in England, a very old tax commencing in the reign of William III., was not discontinued until Lord Halifax changed it to the house duty in 1861.

It must have caused a great amount of consumption, anaemia and other foul air maladies, for in 1850 there were only an average of six windows in English houses. Indeed, the British architects are not yet free from the bad influence of this tax.

In very many old houses in England today there may be seen mock windows painted on the walls for symmetry—hideous things. Not only were glazed windows taxed, but any hole in the wall was included. Indeed, in the early days only very rich people in England had glass windows, and so precious were these that they were carried from one house to another when people moved their quarters.

Curious dodges were practiced to escape the tax, such as extending one window across two houses or making a very wide division between two panes of glass. The loss to the nation must have been a hundredfold the revenues collected from this bad tax.—Boston Herald.

The Word "Set."

What is the favorite word of the English language? The Germans have their "schlag" and "zug," which cover many meanings. But we best them in the one word—"post"—which you might expect of the supremacy of ambiguity—but "set." One always thought that "post" was the word that meant all things and nothing. The punster should watch the word "set," which has achieved nearly seventy columns in the new English dictionary. It is a small word, but its meanings are almost unlimited. You should set to work on the word, which you use every day in a hundred senses. And it would be a pleasant, popular game to set down the number of ways in which you have used that word during the day. "Set to partners" you might call it.—London Chronicle.

Hard Questions.

Oh, tell me, does the setting sun e'er feel a sinking pain? Why is (inform a "Puzzled One") a weathercock so vain? Do stars require a gun to shoot? What makes a bucket fall? What tailor makes the chimney's soot? Who writes the comet's tail? And why are dogs so lovable, however much they whine? Pray tell me, Mr. Editor, what makes the fir tree pine? Why is a vessel's hind part stern? Who sings an old hen's lay? Please tell me, for I'd like to know, who wears the close of day?—London Answers.

The Greek Figures.

Greek figures of men appear taller and more graceful than those of moderns. Modern artists make the upright figure seven and one-half times the length of the head. The Greeks made it eight times, lengthening the shins and the longer sweep from knee to heel gave the figure increased grace and dignity. The same plan was frequently adopted by Lord Leighton, in whose paintings the same effect is obtained.

His Method.

"I always did make a bit with the women," bragged Henry VIII. "With your wit, sire?" murmured the obsequious courtier. "No," answered the monarch, with a sly smile, "with an ax."—Baltimore American.

She Was Anticipating.

"When he proposed to her she knocked him down." "Gracious! What did he say to that?" "He yelled 'Hold on, hold on! We ain't married yet!'"—Houston Post.

Quickly Extracts Corns Gives Instant Relief

To use Putnam's Corn Extractor is to get quick relief. The sting disappears, toes feel better at once another application or two and the corn goes away. Nothing ever known gets so sick as Putnam's Extractor—it's so sure, so painless, so dead certain to root out any kind of a corn that ever grew on foot of man.

Putnam's Extractor never fails, 25c per bottle, sold and recommended by druggists and People's Drug Store.

Embarrassing Advice.

Speaking of bad boys, a prominent actor tells a story of how a wicked youth in the gallery once came near upsetting a show in which he was playing.

"KICK HIM ON THE SHINS."

"Loose my hands, you devil!"

"One evening I had just got the words out of my mouth when the kid in the top seat piped: 'Kick him on the shins, you chump! Your feet ain't tied!'"

"It broke up the audience, and I pretty near broke up the actors."—Milwaukee Journal.

Where Ignorance is Bliss.

Lo, in the vale of years beneath A strident troop are seen, The painful family of Death, More hideous than their queen. They rack the joints, this fires the veins, That every laboring sinew strains. These in the deeper vital rage, Lo, perversely to fill the band That numbs the soul with icy hand And slow consuming age!

To each his sufferings. All are men. Condemned alike to groan, The tender for another's pain, The unfeeling for his own. Yet ah, why should they know their fate, Since sorrow never comes too late And happiness too swiftly flies? Thought would destroy their paradise. No more. Where ignorance is bliss 'Tis folly to be wise.

—Thomas Gray.

He Knew the Signs.

Bob Hull, the champion story teller of Savannah, had occasion lately to take a business trip into interior Georgia. He took his golf clubs with him, intending to stop upon his way back for a match on the famous links at Augusta. He dropped off the train at his business destination—a small town on a branch road—and, carrying his luggage, climbed into an ancient hack and made the driver, who was an old negro man, take him to the local hotel. The negro eyed the queer looking leather bag that his passenger carried with the peculiar looking sticks in it. His curiosity got the best of him finally.

"MOUT I AX YOU A QUESTION?"

"Boss," he began, "please, suh, excuse me, but mout I ax you a question?" "Go ahead and ask," said Mr. Hull. "Wut kind of a lodge is you institut-in'?"—Saturday Evening Post.

He Was All Ready.

A banker in cental Kentucky was in the habit of wearing his hat a good deal in business hours, as in summer the flies used his bald pate for a parade ground, and in winter the cold breezes swept over its polished surface. A negro workman on the railroad each week presented a check and drew his wages, and one day as he put his money in his greasy wallet the banker said, "Look here, Mose, why don't you let some of that money stay in the bank and keep an account with us?"

The darky leaned toward him and, with a quizzical look at the derby the banker wore, answered confidentially: "Boss, I's just afraid. You look like you was always ready to start some-where."—Chicago Examiner.

Bill Won.

Vivian Burnett, who is understood to have been the inspiration of his mother's story, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," had a Harvard education and then tried his hand at journalism, according to the New York Evening Post. A distinguished railroad president came to Denver one day and the editors had reason to suspect that a big story was concealed about him. If it could only be got. The knot of reporters tried in vain, however, to see the big man. Burnett, thinking that the distinction of his mother's name might avail, wrote on one of his own engraved cards the legend, "son of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett." The card came back with a polite refusal. A reporter named Bill Smart looked on scornfully. He tore a jagged piece off the corner of a sheet of copy paper and wrote on it, "Bill Smart, son of old Mrs. Smart." The railroad president was so much pleased at this piece of wit that Bill Smart got the interview.

Gopher In the Hole.

This game requires at least thirteen persons. Circles are formed by three players joining hands. These are the holes. In each hole is another player who is a gopher. One extra player is outside and has no hole. At a given signal from the leader, who may be any one of the players, all the gophers have to change holes, and the one who is outside tries to get a hole. The one who is left out then becomes the hole less gopher.

BUILDING FOR BIDDY.

One thing about Biddy, she doesn't demand the shelter of a palace where in to lay and pay.

One may see along the old Pennsylvania canal several canalboats high and dry on the sod, the domicile of a big flock of cacklers.

Discarded freight cars and cabooses bought for a song, are capital and economical, and our first picture shows a row of deserted dwellings near Bloomsburg, Pa. changed into a first class hen hotel, with hens and roosters cackling and cawing from kitchen to attic.

The plans for this considered quite a prize by the average poultryman. It comes cheap, is good lumber and can so easily be changed into what is needed, and flexible roofing is so handy for covering these homemade contrivances that fill the bill and save money.

A Pennsylvania plant that entered 800 birds at one show has many open

DWELLING CHANGED TO POULTRY PLANT. front houses that are simply a frame roof and the three sides made of corn fodder packed and roped so that they are tight.

We cite these instances because there is a tendency to spend too much on the house and too little on the stock—to begin too big and end in the hole.

There are a number of fine, empty poultry houses scattered through the country because some fellow bit off more chicken house than he could chew.

There is an old rule for orators that applies here. Begin low, go slow, rise higher, catch fire.

The millionaire joy rider may do as he pleases, but let the fellow with moderate means follow this rule when he goes into the business.

Buildings should be as presentable as possible, but not costly. Above all, practical, and it should always be remembered that the flock is the chief asset.

Let the beginner go slow at first, practice economy, do his own work, play carpenter and improvise on lumber. Later, when prospering, more elaborate buildings may be substituted, if desired.

DON'TS.

Don't fail to keep read up, but don't expect a house and lot as a premium with a dollar poultry journal.

Don't forget that it's private trade by which the largest profits are made. When the middleman is between you and your customer you are both between the devil and the deep.

Don't buy the sport from whom you won the blue. Perhaps he would not fake like you.

Don't positively declare that because you did not succeed with a breed it is teotally no good. Some one may say the same of you, but it may be true.

Don't fail to mark your poultry and don't keep the same breed as the man next door.
